DOCTORATE DEGREES

FACULTY OF LAW

DOCTOR OF LAWS

MATLALA David Maphuti

PROFILE

David Maphuti Matlala registered for the B Proc degree at the University of the North, now University of Limpopo, which he completed in 1984. This was followed by his successful completion of the LLB degree at the University of the Witwatersrand in 1986, LLM in Corporate Law at the University of Cape Town in 1988, and LLM at Harvard University in 1990.

The goal of his doctoral thesis was to analyse the twin processes of deregistration and dissolution of a company and the effects thereof. The study revealed that while the Companies Act of 1973 was strong on the procedure to be followed before a company could be deregistered but was otherwise brief on the grounds for doing so, the Companies Act of 2008 is elaborate on the grounds on which a company may be deregistered but lacking on the procedure to be followed before doing so. The study also revealed that the Companies Act of 2008 is silent on a number of issues associated with deregistration and dissolution of companies.

DOCTOR OF LITERATURE AND PHILOSOPHY IN ENGLISH

MAKATI Pamela

PROFILE

Pamela Makati, an education practitioner and language specialist at Milpark Education, was born in 1984 in Bulawayo, Zimbabwe. She graduated from the University of Zimbabwe in 2006 with a Bachelor of Arts Honours in English. In 2007, she enrolled at the University of Fort Hare for a Master of Arts in English for which she graduated in 2009. Thereafter, she registered for her D. Litt with the University of Fort Hare under the supervision of Dr. Jabulani Mkhize.

The aim of the thesis was to provide a womanist perspective on the representation of African female identity in texts written by African authors, namely, Ama Ata Aidoo, Sindiwe Magona, Zukiswa Wanner and Valerie Tagwira. Through a comparative analysis of the selected texts, the study sought to interrogate and explore the various ways in which the image of the African woman has been reinvented and reconstructed by African female writers.

The thesis also examined the extent to which contemporary African women writers have succeeded in recreating the image of African women. One of the examiners, Prof Arndt commented: "Most impressively, Ms. Makati has read, digested and analysed the existing corpus of secondary literature on African women's writings, feminism and female identities. ...the analysis of primary texts once again testifies proficiency." Prof Schatteman puts it more succinctly when she refers to the study as drawing attention to "significant writers who are redefining the literary landscape and concept of women's agency in contemporary southern Africa."

DOCTOR OF LITERATURE AND PHILOSOPHY IN HISTORY

WEBB Denver Arnold

PROFILE

Denver Webb has lived and worked in the Eastern Cape for most of his professional life. He received a Master's in History from Rhodes University in 1993 with an urban, social, economic and cultural history of King William's Town. After a career in museums, heritage and public administration, he retired as the Superintendent-General for Social Development in 2010. He registered for his doctorate with the University of Fort Hare in 2011. His thesis examines military conflict in the eastern parts of the Cape Colony and Xhosaland from 1780 to 1894 and explores how this contributed to the establishment of colonial hegemony.

It seeks to fill gaps in Eastern Cape historiography by providing a general overview of the wars and by exploring various themes emanating from these. It argues that the influence of military conflict in shaping South African society has generally been underestimated and that military discourse in the nineteenth century reflected and contributed to particular knowledge systems, which fed into broader Cape colonial society. All three examiners reported it makes a significant new contribution to historical knowledge, is meticulously researched and should be published.

DUBE Thulani

PROFILE

Thulani Dube is an academic who is currently lecturing at Lupane State University in Zimbabwe. He has previously held lecturing positions at the University of Zimbabwe and Midlands State University (also in Zimbabwe).

His thesis examines climate change information dissemination, access and usage for adaptation purposes by small-holder communal farmers in Matobo district, Zimbabwe. The study finds that climate change information availability (and accessibility) in Matobo district is very limited. Consequently, many smallholder farmers have limited understanding of climate change which directly affects the construction of their adaptation livelihood portfolios.

Furthermore, the study finds that climate change information access (and usage) is closely associated with household economic status. Relatively wealthy households have greater access to information sources and are therefore more knowledgeable about climate change compared to poor households. Lastly, while most previous studies on climate change information have assumed that meteorological seasonal climate forecasting is the primary tool that smallholder farmers use for predicting seasonal climate, this thesis argues to the contrary. It notes that smallholder farmers primarily use indigenous knowledge climate forecasting systems as their knowledge frame thereby challenging some dominant Western views which have long disparaged indigenous knowledge systems. Thulani has published on climate change issues, food security and gender studies.

GOVERE Fredrick

PROFILE

Fredrick Govere has eight years' experience in research, monitoring and evaluation within the health sector. Mr. Govere authored a book and co-authored 2 articles.

This study critically examines the prevailing intervention strategy used by international donors to "push" antiretroviral as the preeminent solution to fighting the HIV/AIDS epidemic. While the biomedical intervention remains the most compelling intervention strategy, Fredrick Govere argues that the fight against HIV/AIDS requires a much more comprehensive approach that takes into account local knowledge, regional context and culture. The thesis notes that, although the politics of HIV/AIDS has changed from civic and community activism to compliance, the focus has remained limited to the biomedical aspects of HIV/AIDS.

The study also shows how political rhetoric delivered through the media and through monitoring, evaluation, and reporting systems are used to embed the pill agenda within the organizational culture and intervention strategies implemented by local organizations. The thesis ends up asking whose interests are best served by the pill agenda and what intended and unintended consequences does the dominance of such a strategy have on communities. Govere concludes by demanding that a more holistic set of strategies be implemented to address the full impact of the disease.

SOKUPA Thabile

PROFILE

Thabile Sokupa attended Pefferville received a Bachelor of Social Science degree (2007), an Honours in Inter-Disciplinary Studies (2008) and a Masters in Social Science (Rural Development) (2010) all from the University of Fort Hare.

Thabile registered for the Doctor of Philosophy in Social Sciences at UFH in 2011. His is an important and significant work which makes new contributions to the field of local governance, citizenship and political protest in South Africa. In particular, its focus on two 'rural' local municipalities (Amahlati and Great Kei) within the Amathola District Municipality of the Eastern Cape is one aspect of this significance as there are relatively few studies which do this and makes it one of the first of its kind for the Eastern Cape.

The other aspect is the way that Sokupa seeks to theorize and investigate citizenship in relation to this rural space, to its 'invited' and 'invented' spaces and in his use of conceptualizations of 'acts of citizenship' which brings new possibilities of analysis and opens up new readings of governance, participation and acts of protest and of citizenship in his case studies, but with much wider relevance as well.

THAKRAR Jayshree

PROFILE

The last decade has seen an exponential growth in university-community engagement policy, discourse and praxis in South Africa and beyond. However, this appears to evade the deeper complex debates of what is a university, what is effective engagement, and who or what is the community? Similarly there is little examination of university-community engagement from the perspective of the 'community'.

In her comparative study involving three places and their local universities in South Africa, Australia, and the United States of America respectively, Ms Thakrar evaluated university-community engagement in its individual components of university, community and engagement. She argues that in terms of place, space, communication, patterns of interaction and alteration over time, the university in fact disengages its local community, that most strategies and forms of engagement remain transactional rather than transformational, and that the term 'community' acts as a mask, hiding just who or what is being engaged. From the perspective of the community, engagement with the university brings about contradictions, misunderstandings and challenges to the engagement experience. Ms Thakrar concludes that community engagement as a term and function remains vulnerable and so she offers an alternative imagination of an engaged university in South Africa.

Together in Excellence

HONORARY DOCTORAL DEGREE

CITATION: Dr. Daniel Alexander Jordaan (DOCTOR OF ADMINISTRATION) (honoris causa)

PROFILE

Chancellor, Honorable Justice Skweyiya, Vice-Chancellor, Dr Tom, and the entire University of Fort Hare community – it is an honour to present Dr Daniel, popularly known as 'Danny,' Jordaan, for the honorary degree, Doctor of Administration (D Admin.)

Danny Jordaan was born in Port Elizabeth, and received his primary and high schooling in the city. Dr Jordaan holds a BA degree from the University of the Western Cape and an Honours degree from the University of South Africa. He has been the recipient of three honorary Doctoral degrees: namely, Doctorates of Philosophy from Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University as well as his alma mater, the University of the Western Cape, and a Doctor of Administration from the University of South Africa.

On completion of his studies at the University of the Western Cape, Dr Jordaan began his professional career as a teacher in Port Elizabeth. He also excelled in sport and from 1970 to 1983 he was a provincial cricket and football player. In the latter sport, he achieved professional status for a brief period. His political and sport interests soon overlapped and the trajectory of his public life was defined, as he became an activist in various organizations fighting to break down racial barriers in sport in South Africa.

The thrust of the nomination of Dr Jordaan for the honorary doctoral degree is in recognition of his outstanding contribution to excellence in sports administration in South Africa. Through his activities in sports administration Dr Jordaan has consistently, and publically, advanced the ideals of democracy, human rights and non-racialism.

His service in the advancement of association football in South Africa has been outstanding. From 1983 to 1992 he served as the president or vice-president of various soccer boards. Dr Jordaan has also served FIFA in several capacities: as the General Coordinator of The World Youth Club (now known as the FIFA Under-20 World Cup), the FIFA Confederation Cup in 2001 and the 2002 FIFA World Cup in Korea and Japan. He was a FIFA Match Commissioner for the FIFA World Cup in 2006as well as being a member of the FIFA World Cup Local Organizing Committee in 2006; he has also served on the marketing and television board of FIFA since 1998.

University of Fort Hare
Together in Excellence

The breadth of his range in sports administration was self-evident when, in 1993, he was appointed as a director of the Cape Town Olympic Bid Company.

In 1997, he was elected as the Chief Executive Officer of the South African Football Association(SAFA), a position in which he increased the organization's annual income from approximately R32 million to R350 million. He subsequently headed South Africa's unsuccessful 2006 FIFA World Cup bid, narrowly losing out to Germany, but gaining great respect internationally for his work. But the 2006 experience stood him in good stead, as a crowning moment in his sports administration career was realized when he successfully led South Africa's 2010 FIFA World Cup bid. Danny Jordaan became a household name in South Africa during that glorious episode in the country's recent history.

Dr Jordaan continued in service of football after the World Cup. On the 28th of September 2013, Jordan was elected as President of SAFA
Given his exemplary stature in national and international football as outlined Dr Jordaan has been an outstanding servant in advancing the cause of social cohesion in the Republic of South Africa.

In terms of his provincial and national profile in politics, Dr Jordaan became involved in anti-apartheid activities by joining the South African Students' Organisation (SASO) in the early 1970s, an organisation founded by Steve Biko in order to defend the rights of black students. Later, Jordaan also became a member of the United Democratic Front and the African National Congress (ANC).

Dr Jordaan's political profile was raised when he was elected in 1990 as the chairperson of the ANC branch in Port Elizabeth North. After the first democratic elections in South African in 1994, he became a Member of Parliament for the ANC under the newly elected, President Nelson Mandela, a position he held until 1997.

In recognition of his outstanding contribution to the realization of a non-racial democracy in South Africa, Dr Jordaan has been the recipient of numerous awards.

He received a Special Presidential Award from President Nelson Mandela in 1994 as well as the Presidential Sport Achievement award from President Thabo Mbeki in 2001. He won South Africa's Marketing Person of the Year award in 2000. In 2004, he was voted in the Top 100 Great South Africans and Newsmaker of the Year. He received a mayoral award from the Mayor of Los Angeles, California on 24 October 2004. Jordaan was also awarded given the Freedom of the City of Maracaibo in Venezuela. He has also received numerous awards from South African cities. After the 2010 FIFA World Cup, Dr Jordaan was honoured by the State President, Mr Jacob Zuma, with the Order of Ikhamanga in Gold for his excellent work in securing the country the right to host the World Cup and seeing to the success of the World Cup itself.

Dr Jordaan has also become known for advancing human rights especially with regard to women and youth.

When he was elected as the President of SAFA in 2013, he mentioned youth development and the strengthening of women's football among his priorities during his term of office. He announced his Vision 2022 Plan, which is a succession plan for national football in South Africa and which aims to develop future soccer stars to take over from the present national players when they retire. Under-15 leagues for both boys and girls have accordingly been developed - a further proof of his commitment to both youth development and gender equality. Furthermore he also explicitly stated that he would push for at least three women to be elected into the SAFA Executive Committee and that the presence of women in the SAFA Executive Committee would help raising the stature of the South African Women's National Team, Banyana Banyana.

University of Fort Hare
Together in Excellence

According to its vision and mission, the University of Fort Hare is not only committed to teaching and research excellence, but it also aspires to use the knowledge thus generated for the scientific, technological and socio-economic development of our nation and the wider world. This is exactly what Dr Jordaan has been doing for a long time and continues to do. Through excellence in sports administration he has contributed in a significant way to social cohesion and socio-economic development in South Africa, and in many countries of Africa and the world. It is for this selfless service that is held in such high esteem around the world.

It is self-evident that Dr Jordaan has met the University of Fort Hare criteria for the awarding of honorary degrees with distinction.

Chancellor, Honourable Justice Skweyiya, Vice Chancellor Dr Mvuyo Tom and the assembled university community, for his lifelong commitment and participation in the political struggle for democracy, non-racialism, for non-sexism and gender equality, and for raising the profile of sports administration, especially, Association Football, in South Africa, it is a distinct privilege for the University of Fort Hare to award the degree of Doctor of Administration (D Admin) to Daniel "Danny" Alexander Jordaan.

DOCTORATE DEGREES

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY IN INFORMATION SYSTEMS

ALLAM Sean Andrew

PROFILE

Sean Allam obtained a BCom in 2005 and an Honours degree in Information Systems in 2006, both from Rhodes University. In 2010, he obtained a Master's degree in Information Systems at the University of Fort Hare. Sean has worked in the software engineering field both locally and in the United Kingdom.

Sean enrolled for a PhD in Information Systems in 2011. His research project followed the principles of design science, culminating in the presentation of an awareness model for improving the smartphone information security awareness level in organisations. The initial findings of the research showed that managers and employees unknowingly contribute to the diminishing levels of information security awareness. In his thesis, Sean illustrated the way in which awareness feedback may be applied to resist the socially driven pressures of productivity and work effort.

Consequently, an iterative evaluation of the awareness model was performed by industry experts and academics using geometric transformation. The resulting consensus found that the research model provided key new insight into the social dynamics responsible for information security awareness. Using this model, organisations can now constantly measure and respond to the natural fluctuations in their information security awareness levels. Sean's research has resulted in three peer-reviewed publications.

TITE Tuyikeze

PROFILE

Tite Tuyikeze has the following qualifications to his credit: a National Diploma (cum laude) in Information Technology (IT) from Walter Sisulu University (WSU) (2004), a BTech in IT from Nelson Mandela Metropolitan University (NMMU) (2005) and a master's degree (cum laude) in IT, also from NMMU (2006). Tite is a lecturer in the IT department at WSU.

Tite enrolled for his PhD in Information Systems in 2011. His thesis argues that an information security policy has an entire life cycle through which it must pass during its lifetime. Based on the result of the content analysis and the inputs of security experts, the study proposes a framework which outlines the various steps required in the development, implementation and enforcement of an effective information security policy. In addition, organisations using the proposed framework will be able to determine the current maturity levels of their information security policy development process and also be able to plan enhancements in the correct sequence. Tite has published three refereed research papers based on his study.

DOCTOR OF PHILOSOPHY IN EDUCATION

GANQA Ncumisa Hazel

PROFILE

Ncumisa Hazel Ganqa obtained her Bachelor of Arts; Advanced Certificate in Education (ACE), Mathematics; Bachelor of Education Honours (B.ED Hons); Master in Education (MEd) at the University of Fort Hare. In 2012 she registered for a PhD in Education.

Based on Bernstein's Vertical and Horizontal Discourse, Ms Ganqa's research investigated how multigrade trained teachers, transferred skills, knowledge and attitudes to their learners. To gain deeper understanding of Bernstein's construct, this study carried out an extensive analysis of the personal diaries, observation of selected lessons and indepth interviews. This research identified a gap between the vertical and the horizontal knowledge in the existing training model, which compromises its effectiveness and relevance.

The study concluded that, on the one hand, skills and knowledge related to teaching strategies; lesson management; curriculum integration and social components of multi-grade teaching represented a positive transfer of learning. On the other hand, the participants encountered challenges in areas such as classroom organisation and management. For effectiveness of future training programmes, Ms Ganqa therefore proposed a balanced post-training framework.

THESIS TITLE: Training of Teachers in Multi-grade Teaching: Implications for Integration of Vertical and Horizontal Knowledge in Post-training.

KASOZI Joseph Amooti

University of Fort Hare
Together in Excellence

PROFILE

Mr Joseph Kasozi holds an MEd (Didactics) and Diploma in Tertiary Education (UNISA); MSc (Reading University – UK); BSc and PGDE (Makerere University – Uganda) plus PGD - Education Management and Administration (IDM Botswana, Lesotho). In 2012 he registered for a PhD in Education at the University of Fort Hare.

Using andragogy as a perspective Kasozi investigated the preparation, induction and professional development of the teacher educators as teachers of adults in Botswana and South Africa. The study was anchored within a mixed methods approach.

The study revealed that in the selected teacher education institutions in Botswana and South Africa little attention was paid to the andragogically informed preparation, induction and professional development of teacher educators. Despite the fact that participants were qualified primary and secondary school teachers, they faced challenges of teaching in a higher education institution. To address this Kasozi proposed an andragogically based framework for the preparation, induction and professional development of teacher educators in the two countries.

THESIS TITLE: Assessing the preparation, induction and professional development experiences of teacher educators in Botswana and South Africa: Implications for an andragogically based model.

MPAHLA Ntando Elliot

PROFILE

Ntando Elliot Mpahla holds a Secondary Teachers Diploma, Further Diploma in Education Management, Bachelor of Arts in Education, Bachelor of Education (Hons) and Master of Education. In 2012 he registered for a PhD in Education.

The study focused on assessing the effectiveness of Continuing Professional Teacher Development (CPTD) programmes in one Education District in the Eastern Cape. A qualitative research design was used. Data were collected through the use of semi-structured interviews and document analysis.

One major finding was that CPTD implementation was undermined by failure to consider teacher preferences regarding their development. There was no evidence of the impact of CPTD programmes on teacher classroom practices. Teachers were not motivated to attend out-of-school CPTD programmes as they, for various reasons, felt not rewarded. The study concludes that despite placing systems and structures for implementing CPTD programmes, the desired outcomes from the CPTD programmes were doubtful. The study proposed a review of the implementation of CPTD programme with an inclination to on-site teacher led programme.

MPAHLA Ntando Elliot
THESIS TITLE: An assessment of the effectiveness of the strategies for implementing continuing professional development programmes for teachers in rural junior secondary schools in Butterworth Education District.

OLAOYE Olabisi Fatimat

PROFILE

Olaoye Olabisi Fatimat obtained a Bachelor of Education (B.Ed. Hons) in English Language, Master of Education in Management (M.Ed.) from Ogun State University and Lagos State University in 1995 and 1999 respectively. In 2009 she obtained another Master's degree in English Language from the University of Lagos. In 2012, she registered for a PhD in Education.

The focus of the study was on the Problem-Based Learning strategies as determinant of Grade 9 students' academic achievement in Algebra. Olaoye's study used a quasi-experimental design within a positivist paradigm. The study revealed that there is significant main effects of treatment; Problem Based Learning (PBL) strategies ($F_{(3.109)} = 5.402$; $p<.05$) on students' academic achievement in Algebra.

The study concluded that problem based learning strategies should be embraced by both the teachers and learners in order to enhance students' academic achievement in algebra. The thesis has produced five papers, four were published and one is under review. Olaoye is highly indebted to her supervisor Prof. Emmanuel O. Adu and Govan Mbeki Research and Development Centre for mentorship and financial assistance respectively.

CONVOCATION MESSAGE

From the Desk of the Convocation President: Mr Max K Makhubalo

In our penultimate centenary year of the establishment of this venerable institution that has become synonymous with all Africa is capable of. Our forebears have left a brand and legacy in the name University of Fort Hare that is worth developing and defending into its second century.

The convocation is proud to welcome you as 2015 graduates into its fold and charge you with the mantra "to whom much is given, much is EXPECTED!!" We believe Fort Harians have distinguished themselves with dedication to the continent of Africa and its people, we expect the same from you. There are rumblings in the higher education sector of the appropriateness of history and its symbols, we wish to say unequivocally that we have an intangible legacy in the NAME FORT HARE that we will defend, that we are proud of as our ALMA MATER.

The economy has not lived to expectations and the twin challenges of poverty and inequality continues to be with us. Fort Hare need to re-look its value proposition from producing managers and professionals in the economy to producing industrialists, entrepreneurs and creators of wealth in the knowledge economy that will be the only way to ensure relevance in the next 100 years.

University of Fort Hare
Together in Excellence

Again congratulations, today is the day first day of the rest of your lives.

Ndiyabulela!

Mr MK Makhubalo
President: Convocation
